On Giving The Stewardship of Now

by Jeni Grangaard

"Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life?" -- Mary Oliver, The Summer Day.

In Jerusalem, my best days start with a walk in the Wallaja Valley. It's a place that holds light and darkness with equal beauty as sun and shadowy mist streak through the trees after sunrise. Its fecund ground holds vibrant rock and blooming wildflowers, hedged by rosemary, sage, and wild thyme.

On my walks this spring, I noticed how the light green tufts, thirsty for chlorophyll, poked through their buds, folded against each other, styled like spiky hair. As the weeks stretched along, small fig leaf shapes slowly emerged. Tiny fruit appeared on the branch, cute in miniature form. Slowly, slowly over time the leaves have grown and taken their deeper color. Soon the fruit will add some purple to its green coat and be ripe for eating. And soon after that the fruit that is left will fall and rot, the fruit marking the ground, the trees once again bare and stark.

The time I have spent out of the United States has trained me to slow down and consider the lilies -- or wild poppies. The stewardship that comes to mind is the practice of slowing down: the stewardship of time.

Economics is a study in decision making. With the limited resources and in particular settings, what tools will one use to make the right choice? What is the most valuable commodity?

We so often think that it is money. Money can buy just about anything. Health care, a good education, nice clothes, a safe home and car. Money can do a lot, but it is time that is more valuable. With time one can make more money. With time one can do it all -- or as women are often pressured, with more time, one can have it all.

But time is limited, a precious commodity, an un-renewable resource. We can't buy it. We can hardly save it. We can only spend it, as Annie Dillard suggests.

Nina Simone once quipped to her live audience, "Time is a dictator," before sliding into "Who Knows Where the Time Goes?" We too will run out of time.

Returning to Mary Oliver: "Doesn't everything die at last, and too soon? Tell me, what is it you plan to do with your one wild and precious life?"

This question has inspired us. It has also put a pressure on many in their quarter-life crisis who shout: "I don't know! There is so much time!" It has also offered a freedom to many in their midlife crisis who whisper: "Something else, I am running out of time."

But the poem isn't pushing us into the future. It is rooting us where we are. The poet does not ask us to hitch our wagon to the one blazing star that will plot the course for the rest of our lives.

The poet calls us to attention as if it was prayer. This is prayer, she offers -- not oratory, but openness, paying attention, being alive. What makes our lives wild and precious is the living of them.

The wild and precious life isn't some possibility, waiting to be attained or perfectly curated. It is in the messy and fleeting present. It is here. It is now. The wild and precious is the sideways moving jaws of the grasshopper as it chews the sugar cube. Or the sticky sweet warmth of a four-year-old who asks to hold hands at bedtime.

It is the unfurling fig tree leaves. The wild flowers. The morning light that reflects my own being. We are called to the stewardship of "NOW"!

May Abundant Table thank you

The May Abundant Table meal was held on May 2nd. We served 69 guests for our spring salad luncheon: ham salad croissant, chicken pasta salad, tuna pasta salad, broccoli and cauliflower salad, fruit salad, Jell-O salad, and desserts.

We want to thank our friends at First Congregational United Church of Christ who provided a Thrivent Grant for the cost of the food, helped serve and clean up, and brought desserts. They also have provided a $500.00 donation for which we are going to buy a gas grill for summer grilling season. They have become a wonderful partner in this ministry.

We want to thank all our Christ Lutheran members who helped set up, serve and/or clean up. They include Darlene Hennessey, Mary Entinger, John Bergseng, Duane McDougall, Jerry Schimelpfenig, Scott and Mary Eckhoff, Mike Savre, Deb and Bill Heuer, Judy Larsen, and Marvin and Gloria Gustafson. Without your generous help we cannot provide this ministry. Also, thanks to Rodger Jenneke and Wally Rannow for helping set up tables and chairs.

We thank the Ministry Team for their work and making the meal: Cheryl McDougall, Connie Heitz, Chris Davis, Dianne VonBerge, Mary Jo Schimelpfenig and Barb Jenneke. Our mission is to "provide a nourishing and hearty meal every month for men, women and children in the Glencoe area and provide an atmosphere of hospitality and openness around the dinner table." We couldn't be successful without your help.

CLC's Bold Woman for 2018. We are excited to announce Christ Lutheran's Bold Woman for 2018 is LaMane Mueller!! As we know, LaMane has been the main cook for Abundant Table as well as shared her cooking and baking talents for many church events. We will be celebrating Bold Women's Day on Sunday, June 3rd at the 9:00 service.

God invites you to move forward into your next chapter of life. There are two things you can do to experience an upgrade in your faith: Give thanks to Him; remind your soul of all of the ways He's come through for you. He's been good. He'll be good again. And, give time and space to sort through your hurts, losses, and disappointments. Jesus will help you reconcile your hurts within the context of His great love for you. Armed with a fresh sense of God's goodness and with a freshly healed heart, you'll be ready to enter into this next precious season He has for you. You can trust Him. Do the inner work; it'll be good for your soul. And rest well in Him tonight.

"Sister" (Kjersten, Alisa and Kara who are real life sisters) will perform at the CLC Women's Fall Gathering.

Save the Date – November 3, 2018. That's the date for CLC Women's Fall Gathering. The theme this year is "Sisters." We are excited to tell you that "Sister" is our main headliner. They are a group of women who sing and bring us a wonderful message. So, mark your calendar, call your sisters and girlfriends and plan on joining us!

Respectfully submitted by Barb Jenneke
